The mastering of the tools of communication and networking is essential for the effective functioning of the networks and to ensure their reach. The seminar was held in January 2012, within the scope of the FIPRIMA project, N° 42, 2012, in Algiers. It was attended by professors of law, specialized in human rights, from the University of Geneva, Switzerland. The seminar aimed to improve the specialist skills of the networks in international human rights law and practice. It provided an opportunity for participants to share experiences, discuss the challenges they face, and identify strategies for effective communication and networking.

The seminar was opened by the President of the CFDA, Ms. Nacéra Dutour, and the French ambassador to Algeria, Mr. François Zimeray. It was attended by representatives of various human rights networks, including the Réseau mondial contre la torture (OMCT), the Réseau euro-méditerranéen des droits de l’Homme (REMDH), the Caisse des retraites not far from the CNCPPDH. However, the police had attended the previous day, and the networks were asked to leave. The seminar was held in the presence of the networks and without the police, who had left.

The seminar focused on the role of women within transitional justice mechanisms, the importance of the involvement of women in the process of truth and justice, and the challenges they face. The seminar was attended by representatives of various women’s networks, including the Commission of Women for Truth and Justice.

The seminar was held in a warm and friendly atmosphere, and the participants were able to share their experiences and discuss the challenges they face. The seminar was attended by representatives of various networks, including the Réseau mondial contre la torture (OMCT), the Réseau euro-méditerranéen des droits de l’Homme (REMDH), the Caisse des retraites not far from the CNCPPDH. However, the police had attended the previous day, and the networks were asked to leave. The seminar was held in the presence of the networks and without the police, who had left.

The seminar was held in a warm and friendly atmosphere, and the participants were able to share their experiences and discuss the challenges they face. The seminar was attended by representatives of various networks, including the Réseau mondial contre la torture (OMCT), the Réseau euro-méditerranéen des droits de l’Homme (REMDH), the Caisse des retraites not far from the CNCPPDH. However, the police had attended the previous day, and the networks were asked to leave. The seminar was held in the presence of the networks and without the police, who had left.